

An Account of Spina Bifida: With Remarks on a Method of Treatment, Proposed by Mr. Abernethy (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from An Account of Spina Bifida: With Remarks on a Method of Treatment, Proposed by Mr. Abernethy

The author, not knowing of any book which has professedly treated on Spina bifida, thinks that it might not be altogether an useless employment, to collect the opinions of such authors of character as have written on a disease which has hitherto baffled all the efforts of the chirurgical art. He has been led to consider the nature of this disease more attentively, from having at present under his care a child afflicted with it, and from having perused a case lately published by Mr. Abernethy, in his treatise on lumbar abscess. But lest any one should take the trouble of reading the following pages with the expectation of meeting with some new and successful mode of treating the disease, he begs leave to apprise him beforehand that he will be disappointed, as he has made no such discovery.
